Dr. E. C. MacDowell told the scientists of some other interesting and valuable experiments with rats. The experiments were made during seventy-five days at the Carnegie Institute Station for Experimental Evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, L. I. If a fair deduction can be drawn from the offspring of tipsy and absternious rate, the children of human alcoholic parents do not labor under any mental handloap. But Dr. MacDowell did not go so far as to say that.

The scientists had many rats under observation; some they made upsy, some they kept strictly sober. The offspring of all these rats were taught a complex trick, and the time they took to perform it was carefully noted. At first the female offspring of alcoholics appeared slow and the males fast in learning, but soon both the male and female offspring of alolics displayed as much rat sense as the offspring of normal parents. Why this was the scientists could not determine, but they are certain the offspring of alcoholic parents did not lack mentality. They are going to make the experiments all over

The visiting scientists saw that remarkable phenomenon—the growth of living cells outside the bodies in which they originated. Dr. Alexis Carrel, now serving France, performed this experiment with coldblooded creatures like the frog; yesterday it was done with a warm-blooded chicklet not yet hatched. ### ARE FOREIGN-BORN MOTHERS BETTER THAN AMERICAN MOTHERS?

American Mother Not a Failure, Is Dr. Elizabeth Jarrett's Opinion-New York's East Side Children Superior to Those of the West Side, Another View.

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

Is the American mother a success? Is she a failuref

Already I have received some interesting answers to these questions from Evening World readers, and I hope to hear from many more of you. If you are a mother, do you believe that you have made or are making your children into the sort of men and women whom you consider desirable? If you are a man, do you think that the mothers of to-day compare favorably with the mother you remember? If you are a young person, are you satisfied with the mothers of your friends-do you want to be like these women when you marry and have children of your own? Is the modern mother a success in herself, and is she making good with her children? I ould like your candid opinions on this subject.

Dr. Elizabeth Jarrett, professor of clinical obstetrics in the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women, who has had more than twenty years' experience in practical obstetrics, thinks that Dr. William H. Guilfoy is somewhat severe in his indictment of the American mother. He said. you may remember, that American women do not make as good mothers as foreign-born women, and he quoted statistics gathered by the Board of President Asks Utah Governor Health which show that in New York City the child of a foreign-born mother has a better chance of life than the child of native parents.

"The Health Board statistics on infant mortality are tremendously interesting," said Dr. Jarrett, "but I imagine their adequate interpretation would involve a detailed knowledge of many facts not touched upon in the discussion which I have seen. Women of many nationalities have been patients in our maternity wards, and the cases of Americans are much less difficult than those of Russians Poles, Swedes or Austrians. "We are constantly hearing about the open air life led in their own countries by the foreign-born who had been the Government's star now living in New York City, but I baby contests, "Now, as to why. I believe the reature to urge upon Your Excellency witness, was given a brief respite. have often had my doubts as to whether the proportion of peasants among our immigrants is quite so large as it is popularly supposed to be. If, however, we are to assume that practically all the foreign-born mothers in New York have peased and becoming nighthawks.

Importance of the case, I again venture to urge upon Your Excellency witness, was given a brief respite. "It is true that the American mother has been more inclined than the foreign-born mother to resort to artificial feeding for the baby, but the American woman's attitude on this subject is rapidly changing. One of the points I emphasize most strongly in the clinic for prospective mothers, which I conduct at the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women, is that nursing is not only an essential factor in the proper nourishment of the infant, but also of vital importatnce in restoring the number to a normal physical condition. I find the American woman just as eager to learn everything that will be conducive to her own health and to that of her baby as is the foreign woman.

"Variation in the matter of maternal devotion is, in my opinion, individual rather than racial, and at certainly could not be expressed in the form of statistics. There is no forces now in operation, mothers,

"I have never believed the children of the east side were in as poor physical condition as many say, or that they were half starved. I have always found that these children had healthier and more substantial bodies, prettier and more sweetly smiling faces, brighter eyes and finer heads of hair, than the children you see on the avenues of the rich and on the west side.
